19th Century

This complex of buildings is primarily significant for its architecture. It is also important as a working farm which has been agriculturally productive for many years.

The most important factor concerning this grouping of buildings is that it provides a complete set of domestic structures; house, barn and outbuildings all of which are in good condition and have received relatively few exterior alterations. Examples of 19th century outbuildings such as the smoke house and bake house on this property are becoming rare.

This farm complex is located on the south side of Newcomer Road approximately one half mile west of route 40-A near Boonsboro in Washington County, Maryland. The buildings are situated on sloping ground near a small spring stream, a tributary of Beaver Creek. The house faces in a westerly direction.

The dwelling is a two story brick structure three bays in width across the front elevation. A one and a half story, two bay ell extends to the rear or east. The walls, are set on low fieldstone foundations which become a full story in height at the north elevation. All brickwork is in American or common bond.

Windows appear to be aligned with each other but are not placed symmetrically in the walls. Window frames are narrow and finished with a bead at the inside edge. They hold six over six pane double hung sashes. Small gable roofed dormers extend from each slope of the roof of the ell extension.

The front entrance of the house is located in the center bay of the west or principal elevation. The door, located beneath a three light transom has an unusual arrangement of six panels with small sections centered between pairs of larger rectangular insets. A pair of entrances are located side by side in the south elevation, one opening into the main structure and the other into the ell. Each entrance displays a three light transom and framing similar to that observed at the windows. Small shed roof entrance porches shelter the doors.

Sheet metal covers the roof structure which extends beyond the end walls. Brick chimney with corbels at their tops are located inside each gable end.

A pair of small brick outbuildings, a smoke house and a bake oven are located northeast of the house. Each of these buildings is one story in height and displays American or common bond Brickwork. The smoke house is painted red. Decorative features include diamond shaped geometric pattern work ventilators set in the side and end walls, and brick cornice work in the form of corbeling on the smoke house and brick dentils on the bake house. Exterior oven doors are still in place on the bake house.

Just north of the dwelling and its accompanying service buildings is a stone structure which appears to have been a dwelling. Constructed of coursed local limestone this three bay, one and a half story building stands directly over a spring of water. Situated on low sloping ground, the dwelling faces south. At the ground story of the front elevation three openings provide light and access to the spring room. The second story level displays a door flanked by a pair of windows. The rear elevation has three windows at the upper or main story and one opening partially below ground at the lower level. One small window is present at ground level and another in the gable of the south elevation. All openings have wide frames joined with wooden pins. The only decorative work associated with the masonry is a circular arrangement of small radiating stones set in the north gable.

A brick chimney is located inside the north gable wall. The roof is covered with sheet metal and terminates with barge boards set against the end walls. Plain boxing finishes the eaves. Deep returns are set into the end walls. The roof structure barge and eaves have been repaired or replaced recently in an effort to stabilize the building.

SPECIFIC DATES

BUILDER/ARCHITECT

This complex of buildings is primarioy significant for its architecture. It is also important as a working farm which has been agriculturally productive for many years.

The most important factor concerning this grouping of buildings is that it provides a complete set of domestic structures; a house, barn and outbuildings all of which are in good condition and have received relatively few exterior alterations. Examples of 19th century outbuildings such as the smoke house and bake house on this property are becoming rare.

The main house and its surrounding dependencies would appear to date from the mid 19th century. A more specific date has not been found. Also architecturally significant is the small stone dwelling which appears to predate the other structures on the property. Constructed of stone and built directly over a spring, this building is an important representative of a major architectural group in the Cumberland Valley. Houses of this type generally date from the late 18th or very early 19th centuries.

The history of ownership of most of the land comprising this farm can be traced back nearly to the date of the original survey in August of 1747. It would appear that most of the land held within this farm is part of a grant called "Chance on Beaver Creek." A tract of land by that name containing 100 acres was initially surveyed for James Dawson. In August of 1756, the property was transferred from James Dawson to Henry Charlton. The boundary description relates that the tract began at the head of a spring which runs into the Beaver Creek. It further indicates that the land was improved with "one log cabbin." Bordering on "Chance on Beaver Creek" are other grants, "Cheney's Parcels," containing 17 acres, "Resurvey on Jerico Hills," with 829 acres and 'Well Meant' containing 265 2 acres. Apparently "Chance on Beaver Creek" was included within another grant, 'Low Germany."1

In April of 1800, Jonathan Rowland sold to Andrew Eavey a tract of 140 3/8 acres made up of four parcels and including "Chance on Beaver Creek." The price of this purchase was b1650. (M/428). Later, in various transactions Eavey acquired other small parcels and at the time of his death held a farm of 227 acres along Beaver Creek. (Equity Court Proceedings 2/1089).

Samuel Newcomer, trustee for the sale of Andrew Eavey's real estate conveyed 152 1/8 acres of Eavey's farm to Elizabeth Emmert and Leonard Emmert in 1844 (OHW2/611). The farm remained in the Emmert family until December of 1911 when it was purchased by Henry Newcomer, (IN5/695, 81/21, 137, 584). Otho A. and Cora Bovey purchased the farm in February 1912 and sold it in 1930 to Alvey R. and Maude I. Dubel, (138/106, 185/344). In 1959, the farm was purchased by Oliver G. Dickinson and Edith S. Dickinson, (351/782) who sold it to the present owners in 1971.
